PRESSURE NEEDS TO BE KEPT UP

TODAY'S match against St Mirren is our final competitive home game of the season and it is my hope that we can provide our supporters with a happy memory to take into the summer after a season of disappointments.

It is not simply a case of producing a good performance and result, though, because the possibility of securing a place in the UEFA Cup competition next season by virtue of finishing third in the Premier Division still exists for us.

It seemed that any hopes we had of doing so had disappeared when we were beaten by a last minute goal at Tannadice just over three weeks ago ...

But then Dundee United, perhaps becoming caught between two stools with one eye on the Scottish Cup final, lost their next three games while we won two in a row.

Suddenly, we had a chance again and, regardless of the outcome of yesterday's Tannadice encounter between United and Hearts, we can keep the pressure on Jim McLean's side by winning today.

Not that a home win against St Mirren can by any means be taken for granted.

I remember vividly that, just last season, the Paisley men came and recorded a 3-0 victory here when they were in relegation trouble.

Our record against them this term has been good, with three league wins and a

Scottish Cup victory, but the indications are that they have tightened up considerably in defence since the appointment of my former team-mate David Hay as manager.

David has stated his intention to use the remaining fixtures this season to evaluate the quality of his squad and their recent performances against Rangers and Aberdeen have demonstrated that the players are determined to prove their worth to the new man.

It is a disappointment that we go into today's game minus the services of Paul Elliott and Anton Rogan because of suspension but I am certainly happy with the way we have coped without such players at different times this season.

For example, Dariusz Wdowczyk and Derek Whyte were superb in central defence at Tynecastle last week when Paul Elliott began his suspension.

Steve Fulton also returned to the side last week and produced an excellent performance.

It remains only for me to wish all the supporters who have got behind us so impressively this season a very enjoyable summer.

I hope that we will have contributed to it by earning a place in Europe next term.

THE final Gallery slot of the season is a psychedelic impression of Celtic's Republic of Ireland international defender Chris Morris by Michelle and Susan Bidwell.

The girls, both 11 years old from Pumpherstoun in West Lothian, have obviously put a lot of time into what is a highly original piece and makes for an eye-catching work.
