HAMILTON NISSAN - YOUR No.1 CHOICE

REALLY I can only reiterate my crushing disappointment and frankly, embarrassment, over our display at Ibrox last Sunday. And it was the manner of the defeat more than the defeat itself which brought the greatest cause for my dismay.

This club has been always renowned for producing teams who refuse to give up. Teams that have been inspired to great fightbacks when things have gone against them. Teams that have rolled up their sleeves, gritted their teeth and forced their way back into matches after falling behind.

Sadly though all of these qualities were non-existent in the Celtic side which faced Rangers last weekend. Yes, it must have been deflating for the players to find themselves one goal down after looking the better side for the first 20 minutes, especially as the manner in which they conceded the first goal was most annoying.

But this does not forgive the fact that, instead of doing their utmost to rectify the situation, too many players simply seemed to accept that this was not going to be their day and stopped competing.

There were few players on duty who demonstrated the right attitude and had enough pride and determination to pick themselves up and make a genuine attempt at winning the game. Most were simply not willing to give it a real go after we had fallen a goal behind.

Hence the contest effectively ended as soon as Rangers went one up — hardly an irretrievable situation — and this is totally unacceptable for Celtic Football Club.

We cannot dwell on the past, though we must learn important lessons from it, and it is now up to the players to show the same appetite, determination and team spirit that was in evidence prior to the Rangers game.

For before that game I felt we were in tremendous form and I was confidently anticipating the type of performance at Ibrox which, if nothing else, would allow us to come away with our pride and respectability intact. Instead both were utterly and entirely surrendered in an ineffectual display.

‘If at the end of the day we are beaten it must only happen after we have done everything in our power to win.’

THE BOSS SPEAKS OUT

Now is the time therefore for the players to show their ability and demonstrate that they value their position at Celtic Park and appreciate what an honour it is to play for this club.

I want to see a team on the pitch which epitomises a side with ambition and hungry for success. The players thirst for glory must match my own and I believe this club should be at the very top not only in a Scottish context but in a European one.

I am sure that is a view echoed by you the fans. As far as I am concerned your commitment to this club entitles you to performances that are an awful lot better than the one you witnessed on Sunday.

If at the end of the day we are to be beaten, then it must only happen after we have done everything in our power to win and you the fans are entitled to expect as much, but sadly this maximum effort was not given at Ibrox.

St Mirren will test all the qualities I have insisted we require today. For like ourselves they are a side desperate for league points — since they appear to be fighting for their premier division lives having slipped back down the table after seeming safe some weeks ago.

It is not an easy fixture and this season St Mirren have proved a tough customer beating us at Love Street 1-0 and then drawing 1-1 here at Celtic Park while we won the other game 2-0 at Love Street in similar circumstances to the ones we face at present.

It is looking increasingly difficult for us to qualify for Europe through the league channel so it is imperative we win today to keep our slim chances of this alive and at the same time set us up for the most important game of the season next Saturday — our semi-final clash with Clydebank at Hampden.

NEWS BEAT

ONE of Celtic's greatest post-World War II goalscorers Dixie Deans flies out to Australia tomorrow for three weeks to be the guest of another of his former clubs.

The stocky striker, who notched 123 goals in 175 competitive games for Celtic, has been invited out by Adelaide City to be guest of honour at a "roast" and play in an Old Boys team in a curtain-raiser to the National Soccer League clash between his former club and Melbourne Croatia on April 15.

Deans is regarded as the best and most successful overseas import to play in Australia's national soccer competition. He made 56 NSL appearances for Adelaide after joining them in 1977.

His leaping ability and goalsense were legendary in the two years he played for City, during which home crowds of 10,000 were guaranteed.

City marketing manager David Jenkins said: "It is the coup of the year to have this Scottish legend returning here."

Deans was delighted to receive the invitation and is looking forward to renewing a few old acquaintances. He confesses to having put on a bit of weight in the decade since he played for Adelaide, but added: "I suppose most of my old team-mates have as well!"

The "roast" and series of barbecues probably won't help matters in that direction but the former Celt, now manager of Carlisle's Railway Inn, is sure to enjoy his three weeks in the sun.

CUED UP FOR CHARITY

Konrad's back in happy group

CELTIC'S first Polish player Konrad Kapler was a visitor to Celtic Park last Friday and delighted to meet up with his illustrious fellow-countrymen Jacki Dzieknowski and Dariusz Wdowczyk, stars of the present side.

Kapler was a small and tricky left-winger who caught the eye of then Celtic manager Jimmy McGrory while playing for the Polish Army side in Johnstone in 1946.

His de-mob from the army was rushed through and he became a Celtic player in the era of Bobby Evans, John McPhail, Pat McAuley and Jock Weir.

Johnny Paton was a rival for the outside-left position and Kapler played comparatively few first-team games in his two seasons at Celtic Park but he remembers those years with great affection.

"In those days, you were a Celt," he recalls. "It was not a case of being a first team player or a reserve. It was just one big happy group."

The signing of Charlie Tully from Belfast Celtic spelt the end of Kapler's days at Celtic Park and he moved south to join Rochdale, where he has lived ever since. He later also played for Altrincham.

John Thomson link continues

AMONGST the crowd for this afternoon's game against St Mirren will be a party of youngsters from Cardenden, Fife, where the body of famous Celtic goalkeeper John Thomson was buried.

The party is made up of boys from the village who were successful in the annual seven-a-side tournament staged last year by the John Thomson Memorial Committee, based in Cardenden and an organisation which has close links with Lochgelly Celtic Supporters' Club.

Committee secretary Alex Burns has run the event for the past 11 years, since Celtic FC put up a shield for competition. Tommy Coyne travelled through to the final stages last year to present the medals and previous representatives from the club have been Davie Provan, Ronnie Simpson, Pat Bonner and Willie Fernie.

Celtic Boys' Club also travels to the village on an annual basis to play for a trophy and organisers are delighted with the strong link they have with the club for which John Thomson played.

Included in the group to visit Celtic Park today will be boys from the 1989 winners and runners-up as well as winners of special awards. They will be accompanied by a committee member and community education worker Angus McKain.

Mr McKain said: "It is our ambition to have Cardenden produce a player for Celtic, though we were delighted to see young Kevin Bain, who is on Dundee's books, captain Scotland's World Youth Cup side last year.

"The committee has made big strides in recent years and one former star who has helped a lot is Willie Johnston, formerly of Rangers and West Bromwich Albion. Billy McNeill has done his bit over the past couple of years, too".

Ode to an exiled poet

QUITE often we are sent poems on one subject or another but very rarely do we receive a fully bound book of verse.

This is what Charles O'Connor sent us though and his work entitled 'An Irishman In Exile's Verse' contains several poems devoted to Celtic — his favourite team.

In cod-Yeatsian style his poetry concerns a range of subjects including the current situation in his now adopted homeland of South Africa though Mr O'Connor seems to display a lack of both sensitivity and enlightenment on this subject.

A Celtic View subscriber of two decades Mr O'Connor has some way to go before he matches the lyrical achievements of Tom Leonard writing about his beloved Glasgow Celtic.

ST. MIRREN

THE STRUGGLE for premier division survival is one which St Mirren have not yet conquered. For although they have what seems like a comfortable four point cushion over bottom club Dundee with only five games remaining (the result of Dundee's midweek match against Hearts was unknown at time of going to press), the impressive form of the Tayside men means that the Saints are far from secure.

And though everyone at the Paisley club may give the outward impression of being calmly confident that their present league status is safe, inwardly there is no doubt their nerves will be jangling and they will be feeling the pressure. Indeed a few more bad results could put them in grave danger, assuming, of course, Dundee can continue to pick up the points in the manner they have of late.

Really a team with as many quality players as the Saints possess should never find themselves in a situation like their current one but the fact that they do illustrates the Love Street side's major problem.

Inconsistent may be an over used word in football and may even be over used in descriptions of the Paisley men, but really there can rarely be a word which sits more comfortably (or uncomfortably as the case may be) on the shoulders of a football team.

Going further in fact if the word did not exist it would have to be invented such is its aptness in expressing St Mirren's trials and tribulations.

While their league form has been predictable St Mirren's current season is more pointedly summed up by examining their fortunes in the Scottish Cup.

After taking two games to defeat first division side Ayr United they were paired with Clydebank at home and once more the tie went to a replay, by such times as an early Margaret Thatcher-inspired draw meant that they looked to have a relatively easy run to the semi-final, since the winners of their replay had either Stirling Albion or Inverness Caley.

Before thoughts of a repeat of their 1987 Scottish Cup triumph could be entertained to the full though St Mirren had been well beaten in the replay. A typical example of the Love Street way of operating.

Whilst a fair percentage of St Mirren's problems appear to be psychological they also have on-the-field deficiencies which have hampered their progress.

For though the Love Street defence looks solid with such class players as Fraser Wishart, Roddy Manley and Tom Black, and midfield has flair in the likes of Paul Lambert and Brian Martin, their forward line has almost been led singlehandedly by Gudmundur Torfason who with 12 goals this season has been responsible for almost half the Saints total.

In their last SEVEN league outings St Mirren have failed to hit the target and the fact that Kenny MacDowall is second top scorer with four goals demonstrates just how acute the problem is.

There must come the time when St Mirren's player pool is justified with favourable results and a modicum of success. Manager Tony Fitzpatrick will be hoping his team show enough to allow any success to be as a premier division side next season.

Joe Miller heads home the first goal in Celtic's 2-0 defeat of St Mirren at Love Street in January of this year as Tom Black and Campbell Money look on despairingly.

THE PLAYERS

CAMPBELL MONEY (Goalkeeper)

Born 31.8.60 in Maybole

Signed for St Mirren in 1978 from Dailly Amateurs and had to wait until 1984 before commanding a regular place in the side, which was gained through the departure of Billy Thomson to Dundee United. Is currently winning the battle for the no 1 jersey, though great rival Les Fridge has displaced him on several occasions in recent seasons. Has represented his country at under-21 level and found himself on the Scotland bench against Argentina 10 days ago after Andy Goram injured his hand, though looks likely to miss out on Italy with Bryan Gunn Scotland's recognised no 3.

FRASER WISHART (Defender)

Born 1.3.65 in Paisley

Fraser's first season in Saints colours after a 'dream move' from Motherwell in the close season has been one of frustration as injury and loss of form have curtailed his first team appearances. A player of undoubted talent, the composed full-back began his senior career in 1984, signing for Motherwell from Pollok Juniors and making his Premier Division debut in 1985. Soon became a regular in the Fir Park side where he regularly shone. So much so that, more than once, he seemed on the verge of an international call-up before his £285,000 transfer last summer. Has recently operated in the Saints midfield and will be hoping to put the season's troubles behind him and look forward to better times.

TOM BLACK (Defender)

Born 11.10.62 in Lanark

After spending nine years with Airdrie, Tom became another of manager Tony Fitzpatrick's close season signings when he joined the Paisley club for a fee of £125,000. Has already justified that outlay with some sterling performances in the left-back position where he looks comfortable and assured.

PETER GODFREY (Defender)

Born 12.10.57 in Falkirk

The veteran of the Love Street side, Peter only turned full time at the age of 27 on moving from Meadowbank Thistle to St Mirren. Signed by Alex Miller, he has been a steadying influence in central defence and a fixture in the side when fully fit. Unfortunately, he has been dogged by injuries, one of which forced him to miss Saints' Scottish Cup triumph in 1987.

RODDY MANLEY (Defender)

Born 23.7.65 in Glasgow

Yet another close season defensive signing, Roddy began his senior career with Falkirk, joining them in 1984 from Knightswood Juniors. Was prised from the Bairns in a £250,000 transfer deal and made his debut against Celtic at Love Street in September.

CELTIC FACE TODAY

DAVID WINNIE (Defender)

Born 26.10.66 in Glasgow

Was appointed club captain at the beginning of the season, becoming the youngest captain in the Premier Division and he is the only St Mirren player in the current side to have begun his career as an S-form at the club. A hard worker in defence, he has also been utilised at full-back and midfield

BRIAN MARTIN (Midfielder)

Born 24.2.63 in Bellshill

Began his senior career with Falkirk, joining the Bairns from Shotts Bon Accord in 1985. From there he moved to Hamilton Accies in April 1987 where he made 30 appearances before joining St Mirren in February 1988 for £60,000. Has been virtually ever present in the Love Street side since in the middle of the park, full-back or central defence, though his midfield role is by far the most regular and effective for the player.

PAUL LAMBERT (Midfielder)

Born 7.8.69 in Glasgow

A young player with considerable experience, Paul joined St Mirren in 1985 from Linwood Rangers Boys Club. Won a Scottish Cup winners medal in 1987 but his Paisley career has stuttered recently as he found himself out of favour, though his transfer requests have been consistently turned down. Returned to starting line-up last week

GUDMUNDUR TORFASON (Forward)

Born 13.12.61 in Westmann Islands, Iceland.

Signed from Rapid Vienna for £225,000 on the recommendation of former Malmö manager Bob Houghton, Gudmundur is a man of many clubs having previously played for Fram Reykjavik, Beveren and Ghent. Has proved a tremendous success with fantastic ball skills and agility for a large man, as well as great aerial power. Been responsible for almost half of St. Mirren's goals this season and is far and away their top scorer with 12 goals. An Icelandic internationalist he has represented his country 24 times.

THOMAS STICKROTH (Forward)

Born 13.4.65 in Germany.

Began career with VfB Stuttgart in 1981. Had spells with Friebrug and SV Homburg before joining Bayern Leverkusen in 1988. Moved to St Mirren last month on a loan period till the end of the season, though so far the powerful front man has found the transition from Bundesliga to Premier Division football a hard one

GEORGE SHAW (Forward)

Born 10.2.69 in Glasgow.

Joined St Mirren in 1987 from Ayresome North and after a few substitute appearances last term this season has seen the tricky little winger being given an extended run in the side. Has been a regular since February

KENNY McDOWALL (Forward)

Born 29.7.63 in Glasgow.

Began his senior career with Partick Thistle, signing in 1980 from Drumchapel Amateurs. Four years later Alex Miller took him to Love Street though Kenny's early days with the Saints were difficult as the player found it hard to gain acceptance from the fans. This season has seen Kenny become a regular in the side and the hard, tireless front man is the Saints second top scorer with four goals.

PAUL KINNAIRD (Forward)

Born 1.11.66 in Glasgow.

The former youth internationalist joined Dundee United in December 1985 from Norwich City but failed to gain a regular first team spot and moved to Motherwell in March 1988 for £20,000. Less than a year later he joined St Mirren for a nominal fee where he has been used wide on the left flank although has also been played in midfield and in a centre forward position.

THE FACT that it was not until Tommy Coyne scored the winning goal in the fourth round Scottish Cup tie against Rangers at Celtic Park before many people accepted that he had 'arrived' as a Celtic player, is a source of amusement to the player himself.

"I had already been with the club ten months by then and I think I had proved myself in earlier games," He said. "But that is the game that everyone cites as my coming-of-age and it just shows how important it was and how intense the rivalry is between the two clubs."

He continued: "I think that fact was brought home to me in the Ibrox game in November. I missed a half-chance, yet afterwards I was slaughtered in the press and criticised, unfairly to a great extent I felt, from every corner."

"That showed just how much every aspect of an Old Firm game is analysed and, as regards that specific game, I think I took a lot of stick because we ended up losing the game, with a certain Mo Johnston scoring Rangers' goal."

"Thankfully, I think that is all behind me. The winner against Rangers in the cup gave me a lot of satisfaction and set me off on a run," Tommy added.

It is a run which has seen him hit the target regularly and given him a strike rate for the season of a goal almost every other game — the best of any Celtic forward.

Yet this season has hardly been one of smooth progress for Tommy, containing periods of dejection as well as triumph.

"I felt things were going well at the start of the season. Although I wasn't a new player I was as good as one, because the tail end of the previous term didn't really give me a chance to prove myself and also I found myself working with new players at the beginning of this season."

"I thought things began well, I was scoring some goals and my general form pleased me. The turning point was the Partizan Belgrade game when the manager tried a new formation up front. The boys played well that night, scoring five goals, and after that I found myself on the bench for several weeks."

Then, as the side floundered, finding goals and points hard to come by, Tommy found himself on the receiving end of a distressing amount of personal abuse, often whether he was playing or not. Indeed there seemed a time when, if it had rained during a match, some supporters would have blamed it on Tommy Coyne.

Did he feel he was being made a scapegoat for the whole team's poor displays and did the criticism hurt?

"I accept criticism though I don't really feel I was made a scapegoat for what was happening," he said "Rather I think that it was to do with the fact that Celtic have always scored a lot of goals but the strikers at this time were not getting too many."

I really believe that is where the disappointment of the fans came from but it was understandable. As far as personal stick goes, I think during a bad patch every possible deficiency is highlighted.

"You can't allow yourself to be bothered about what people say about you, though some does get to you. Everyone has their favourite player and you just have to get on with it."

Now, though, Coyne can look forward with justifiable optimism. And he has set himself some achievable targets.

"I hope to score a few more goals between now and the end of the season. Indeed my main aim is to be Celtic's top scorer. At the moment I'm second to Jacki but I'll be

"I have always been confident in my ability to score goals", says re-born striker Tommy Coyne.

THE SPOT

going all out to be no 1.

"Obviously, helping to win the Scottish Cup is a big part of my thoughts too."

"And, while our semi-final tie against Clydebank won't be any pushover, if I had to choose one team to play from the remaining three left in the competition it would have been Clydebank. So I can really say that I'm pleased with the way things turned out there."

Good fortune

Any striker's success is determined by a certain amount of good fortune and that is a quality which could be said to have deserted Tommy in the darker times of a few months ago. Does he now feel that it is something which has now turned for the better for him?

"You have to be lucky to a certain extent when you're a striker but a lot of luck is self-made. For instance, you have more chance of scoring if you create 10 chances than if you only make two."

"Confidence is another vital factor in scoring goals. In that sense I have always been confident in my ability to score goals. It also affects your all round play. When you are confident, you might be a little more ambitious and try things you might otherwise not."

"If you score at the start of a match, for instance, then you feel better when you are playing the rest of the game."

"It was a testing time when I was out of the team but now I am playing and scoring some goals I feel a lot happier about everything."

Improving fortunes for boys

CRAMMING in the fixtures has been the order of the past couple of weeks for Celtic's reserves as postponed games have to be fitted in along with the two games a week already listed.

Since the last programme, Celtic have played twice in the premier Reserve League (and were to travel to Pittodrie on Wednesday night, after this programme went to press) and fulfilled three Reserve League West fixtures.

That sequence began with a 3-0 win over foot of the table Dunfermline Athletic at Celtic Park in the Premier Reserve League, but the victory was not as convincing as the margin suggests.

Indeed, the Fife side missed TWO second half penalties as they tried hard to battle their way back into the game, led by the vastly experienced duo of Doug Rougvie and Sandy Clark. Stuart Balmer had given Celtic an interval lead by converting a spot-kick, Gerry Britton got the second between the Pars' penalty misses and Raymond McStay completed the scoring with a header.

Celtic's other Premier League fixture was the Old Firm encounter, also at Celtic Park, last Saturday. The match attracted some 7,500 spectators but Celtic dropped a point in their late bid for the title when they failed to cash in on vast territorial advantage and had to settle for a point in a 0-0 draw.

Midfielders Raymond McStay and David Elliot were in outstanding form and the latter had several shots at the Rangers goal, as did Gerry Creaney and Dugald McCarrison, without success. Keeper Andy Murdoch was another Celtic stand-out, producing a couple of top class saves to prevent Rangers from snatching both points on their rare breaks.

Celtic's hat-trick of Reserve League West matches of the past fortnight began in disappointing style with a 3-1 defeat from Partick Thistle at Springburn. Thistle scored late in the first half and twice in the early stages of the second before Alex Mathie reduced the deficit by firing home a free-kick.

Two days later, Queen of the South provided the opposition at Celtic Park and crashed to a 5-0 defeat. The young Celts were boosted by the experience of Mike Galloway, getting a run after serving his three-match ban, Lex Baillie, Steve Fulton and Andy Walker.

Fulton put the home side in front and Walker added a second before the break. The striker went on to notch a hat-trick with two more goals in the second half. Midfield starlet Brian O'Neil headed Celtic's fifth.

Celtic were at home again on Monday night when Dumbarton were the visitors. Gerry Britton and Gary Bendoris were on target for the Celts in a 2-1 win which keeps them comfortably in the top half of the table though with little chance of retaining the title claimed last season.

It looks as though their Premier Reserve League challenge will also prove in vain as pacesetters Dundee United need win just one of their remaining three fixtures to secure the title for the third successive season.

So Celtic's main hope for a trophy rests on the Reserve League Cup, where they will face either Motherwell or Hearts in a semi-final at Celtic Park.

Reserve team coach Bobby Lennox and youth development officer Benny Rooney have been satisfied with the progress made by the youngsters in recent weeks, the latter stating: "They are definitely improving and that is what the Reserve League West is all about."

A typical Lennox strike, as Bobby nets against Hearts in 1969.

THE HALL

THERE was never any more whole hearted professional football player than Bobby Lennox. Nicknamed the "Buzz-bomb", it was always a matter of some surprise to me at least that Lennox did not consider sprinting as an alternative sport to football. To say that he was fast is an understatement. Countless times he was so fast that he even beat the linesman, and was flagged for offside by an official who clearly could not believe that he could move so quick.

In a career at Parkhead which spanned eighteen years from 1962 to 1980, he scored 275 goals, and yet he was not known primarily as a goal scorer. He could make them as well. There is something quintessentially Celtic about Lennox. Everything is done at speed, every ball is chased for and there is not a hint of selfishness or bravado about his play.

Even now when his hair is visibly thinning, there is an air of perpetual youth and jauntiness about this instantly likeable bloke. He was a great friend of Jimmy Johnstone, and the memory remains of these two likely lads on a train en route for Aberdeen with their arms around each other's necks singing "Roll over, Beethoven" or some other Beatles classic.

His early years at Parkhead before the arrival of Stein were not happy ones. His debut was at Parkhead in March 1962 against Dundee who were to win the League that year. Celtic however beat them 2-1, but so unimpressive was young Lennox that he never played again that season. He was given a run at the start of the next season on the right wing, but once again failed to come up with the goods. From then on until the arrival of Stein, his appearances were sporadic and disappointing. It was rumoured that he was about to join Falkirk.

And yet I remember seeing him at a reserve match at Tannadice Park in early 1964 after which I refused to write him off completely. You see, he looked like a football player with his short hair, bow legs and his perpetual harrying of the opposition defence.

By early 1965 and before Stein took over, Lennox was teaming up with Auld on the left and beginning to relish his role closer to the centre of the park. As significant a goal as any that he ever scored was in a Cup tie against Queens Park at Hampden. Celtic were playing as badly as ever (and in the context of the mid-60's, that is saying something!) and Queens Park might have snatched a goal. But suddenly a through ball found Lennox in space. He ran on to score in the way that we later expected him to do, but I often wondered what might have happened (or not happened) to the team if that one had been ballooned over the bar or shot tamely at the goalkeeper.

The tactical acumen of Stein brought out of Lennox all the innate ability that had been latent. He combined well with Auld to earn the qualizer early in the second half of the 1965 Cup Final, and it was his running that won the corner that gave us the glorious winner. The following season saw him rescue Celtic in a tight League Cup Semi-Final against Hibs with a late goal. He was in the team that beat Rangers in the League Cup Final, but significantly, did not play in the Scottish Cup Final against the same opponents. The replay, in particular, might well have been won had Lennox been there to take advantage of Auld's creative play. In the three games which won the League after this Hampden defeat, Lennox played and scored in every game.

Many times through his career Lennox scored late and vital goals. This was because he was superbly fit and could still run like a whippet when tired defenders had all but given up the ghost. It was this permanent ability to run that induced Stein to play him in away legs of European matches. In such games the defence need someone to take the pressure off, and a greasy, toe-ender of a punt up the field in the general direction of the opponent's goal would always find Bobby prepared to chase.

1967 of course saw European glory and worldwide recognition for the speedy fellow from Saltcoats. The story went that the then Rangers manager Scot Symon woke up on morning with a sore back (he already had a bad side!) and told his wife that he was "getting auld". She told him to get Lennox as well.

The Parkhead crowd always loved a trier, and there was no more enthusiastic Celt than Bobby. An old friend of mine referred to him as "little Lennoxie" — the suffix denoting affection and respect, as well as admiration. The year after Lisbon saw Lennox score 32 goals, and once again Celtic were indebted to him for a late and vital goal in the second last game of the season against Morton which in fact won the Championship. It was by no means a classic goal, but he was there on the spot to prod it home and win the game.

Another highly significant goal came in the 1969 Cup Final against Rangers. Celtic were a goal up and as half-time approached Lennox pounced upon some shoddy defensive work to charge past Mathieson and score clinically, paving the way for a 4-0 thrashing. This was only three weeks after the League Cup had been won when Hibs were beaten 6-2, and Lennox scored a hat-trick.

Through the seventies, Lennox was never far from the first team at Celtic Park. He won a Scottish Cup Medal again in 1975 against Airdrie. McNeill retired after this game, and it was felt that Lennox might do the same but he kept on and on. He was now oftener out of the team than in, but never complained, never asked for a transfer. Eventually in 1978 he went to the home of lost causes, the USA, to play for Houston Hurricanes, but returned to win his final Cup Medal as a substitute against Rangers in 1980. He was appointed to the reserve team in 1980 after being forced to quit through injury at 37 years old! It is a matter of some happiness that he is still with the club, surviving various managerial upheavals. Seldom can one club have received such service from one man, and there can be fewer better loved Celts than he. He had his leg broken in an Old Firm game in late 1976 following a clumsy tackle by a famous Rangers defender who always seemed to have an identity crisis when Lennox was around. And yet Bobby bounced back.

He won a total of 25 medals for the team and was capped 10 times for Scotland, the most famous game being the 3-2 Wembley victory for 1967 in which Bobby became the first Celt to score at Wembley.

A POSITIVE attitude and good reflexes in front of goal secured Celtic both points in a game they worked hard to win.

Underfoot conditions were far from ideal and hampered the flow of play in a match which was never one-sided as there was little to separate the teams apart from Celtic's superior finishing. They opened the scoring in 10 minutes through Paul McStay (pictured) who met a Hearts clearance to send a shot under Henry Smith's body.

Celtic added a second goal in 65 minutes when Donald Park's crossfield pass bounced off the referee and back to Brian McClair who raced in to shoot low past Smith.

The nearest Hearts came to a reply was when McStay was forced to clear from the line but the visitors finished strongly, with both Davie Provan and Mo Johnston bringing out fine saves in Smith.

CELTIC's title aspirations took another severe dent as Dundee United inflicted a heavy defeat with three second half strikes.

Celtic started brightly, looking the team more likely to score in the first 20 minutes and created several chances, the best effort being a blistering shot from Bobby Lennox which flew just past the post. With the forwards less than sharp, though, Celtic's challenge fell away.

Four minutes into the second half, Alan Sneddon (pictured) missed the ball when trying to clear and Davie Dodds ran on and scored. Dodds added a second time in 61 minutes when he nodded in the rebound from a free-kick, which rebounded from a post.

CELTIC 1, MORTON 1

Att: 13,000

KENNY DALGLISH, in his first game as club captain, could not inspire his team to victory as Celtic struggled once more and were unable to overcome a lowly Morton side on home soil.

In only six minutes Celtic took the lead though striker Paul Wilson (pictured) but thereafter Celtic's threat fizzled out.

Though they continued to have the lion's share of the play, they rarely troubled Roy Baines in the Morton goal. It was the same story in the second half after Celtic conceded a bad goal on the 50 minute mark, with Danny McGrain putting the ball through his own net.

Even the return of striker Dixie Deans and the introduction of Brian McLaughlin as sub could not lift the Celtic side and, with the league out of their grasp, worries centred on finding form for the coming Scottish Cup final.

Celtic: Latchford; McGrain, MacDonald, Connelly, McCluskey; Glavin, Hood, DalGLISH; Lennox, Deans (Callaghan), Wilson (McLaughlin).

OUTGOING Secretary of the SFA Ernie Walker, certainly put more than a few noses out of joint with his comments on the state of Scottish football. His description of the standard of domestic club football as 'absolutely appalling' did not go down well with many connected with the Scottish game but there were equally as many people who regularly spectate in this country who applauded Walker's remarks while not necessarily agreeing chapter and verse with his claims.

No doubt there were others who, while not wishing to openly side with the retiring secretary gave tacit approval by the fact that they refused publicly to dismiss his claims.

Indeed, and Walker clarified that he was speaking in this context, if Scottish football is compared with its European counterparts then it tends to languish far behind most of the better footballing nations.

For proof of this one only need compare the respective successes of countries in the European counterparts then it tends to languish far behind most of the better footballing nations.

For proof of this one only need compare the respective successes of countries in the European arena. And while it does not make for pleasant reading it none the less tells its own tale.

Last year for example three of the five Scottish clubs, Rangers, Celtic and Aberdeen, fell at the first hurdle and the other two, Dundee United and Hibernian, our representatives in the UEFA Cup, the least prestigious European tournament, failed to progress past the second round.

Looking at these countries in greater detail our premier division champions Rangers, and by implication our best club side were completely outclassed by a Bayern Munich side who, by Rangers own manager Graeme Souness's admission were a good, but not a great team.

With Rangers looking likely to add another premier division crown to their many honours this year, they will once again go forward as our major Scottish representatives, taking their place in the European Cup.

Were Walker's comments so out of order?

Yet if anything, they are in a weaker position now than they were last year. For their recent run of six games without a win could suggest that their success this year owes as much to the anemic challenge of their closest rivals than it does to the Ibrox side's greatness.

If any more proof was required that further improvements will have to be made before they can compete on a serious level in Europe, Arsenal's comfortable defeat of Rangers, last December on their own turf must also be cause for discomfort.

Walker also claimed in the course of the offending interview the basic skills are being lost in the Scottish game and his sentiments here are only echoing many similar statements made by Jim MacLean down the years.

Indeed it was sad to hear MacLean several weeks ago admit defeat with regard to finding and rearing bright Scottish prospects. He said that the well of Scottish talent had now run dry and he would be forced to go to the continent in future to try and unearth some undiscovered raw talent there. With such a reputation for finding the most skillful Scottish youths MacLean's comments must be regarded with some seriousness.

The fact that virtually all the premier division sides contain players who were born and served their soccer apprenticeship outwith these shores cannot simply be seen as a sign of a booming game. It must also in some ways demonstrate a dearth of talent within Scotland. For ask any manager and he will tell you without question, that there is nothing he would like better than to play 11 home grown players and take it easy on his cheque book.

Jim MacLean ... has conceded defeat in his search for young Scottish talent

It is not as if the old claim can be made that the Scottish game has been colonised by the English one and that all Scotland's best players are playing for English teams.

Certain salient considerations do not support this view. A look at the recent squads for the Scotland internationals shows that the Anglo is on the decline with more and more of the Scotland team playing their football in the country of the origin.

The recent English Professional Player of the Year Awards also showed Scots no longer dominate the English game. Indeed the division one 'Team of the Year' contained only one Scottish player, Alan Hansen, and he is no longer even involved in the international scene.

While there are obvious worries for the Scottish game at the club and international level, there is also a great deal of which to be proud. It should never be forgotten that we are a minnow nation and, what we have achieved on both the domestic and international front has been a fine tribute to our endeavours.

Further it cannot be said categorically that these achievements will not be bettered or at least equalled in the forthcoming years. There is simply nagging doubt that things are not quite as they should be...

- ★ KEITH Walker's header for St Mirren in the first Premier Division meeting of this season was their 100th league goal against Celtic in Paisley. It was also the first time since May 1980 that Celtic have failed to score at Love Street.
- ★ WHEN St. Mirren beat Celtic in the above match it was the first time in nearly six years they had achieved a win over Celtic. In fact their last league win at Celtic Park was in November 1980 when they won 2-1.

PROGRAMME OF THE YEAR AWARD

THIS month the magazine Programme Monthly, a publication devoted entirely to the dissection and collection of football programmes, published the results of the 'Scottish Programme of the Year Awards'.

The competition has been in existence since 1973/74 season but this year broke with a traditional internal adjudicating scheme, throwing the marking open to the 38 programme editors of Scotland's senior clubs as well as three prominent Scottish Programme dealers.

All the editors were given ballot papers and asked to consider the programme of the other clubs in their division and mark points out of a 100 for each, discounting their own of course.

As can be seen from the table included, which is the tabulated figures of the twenty editors that replied, the Celtic programme finished in a disappointing eighth position.

Reasons for our such poor showing seem to centre on the size of the programme which this year we increased to what Programme Monthly describes as 'brochure-size'. This appears to have met with a fair amount of disapproval or to quote Programme Monthly again, met with "a fairly emphatic 'vote of no confidence' from their peers."

It is true to say that reaction to our new format has been mixed but any change always takes time to be accepted. Further we were not the only club to suffer from this backlash against the larger size programme as fellow Glasgow side Rangers also took some stick for adopting an A4 style and dropped from no.1 position in the rankings last year to seven in this season's table.

Followers of our reviews of the other premier division programmes will see that most editors found themselves in agreement with us regarding the quality of Aberdeen and Dunfermline's Programmes and the relative lack of quality of Hearts magazine.

Deviations between our view and the views of the other editors arise in relation to the Rangers, St Mirren and Dundee works. While we gave favourable reviews to Rangers and St Mirren and were critical of Dundee's efforts the final chart shows quite the opposite attitude to be prevalent amongst most editors.

CLOSED CIRCUIT TELEVISION

The first televised football match, 1937

Now every major League ground is equipped with television cameras.

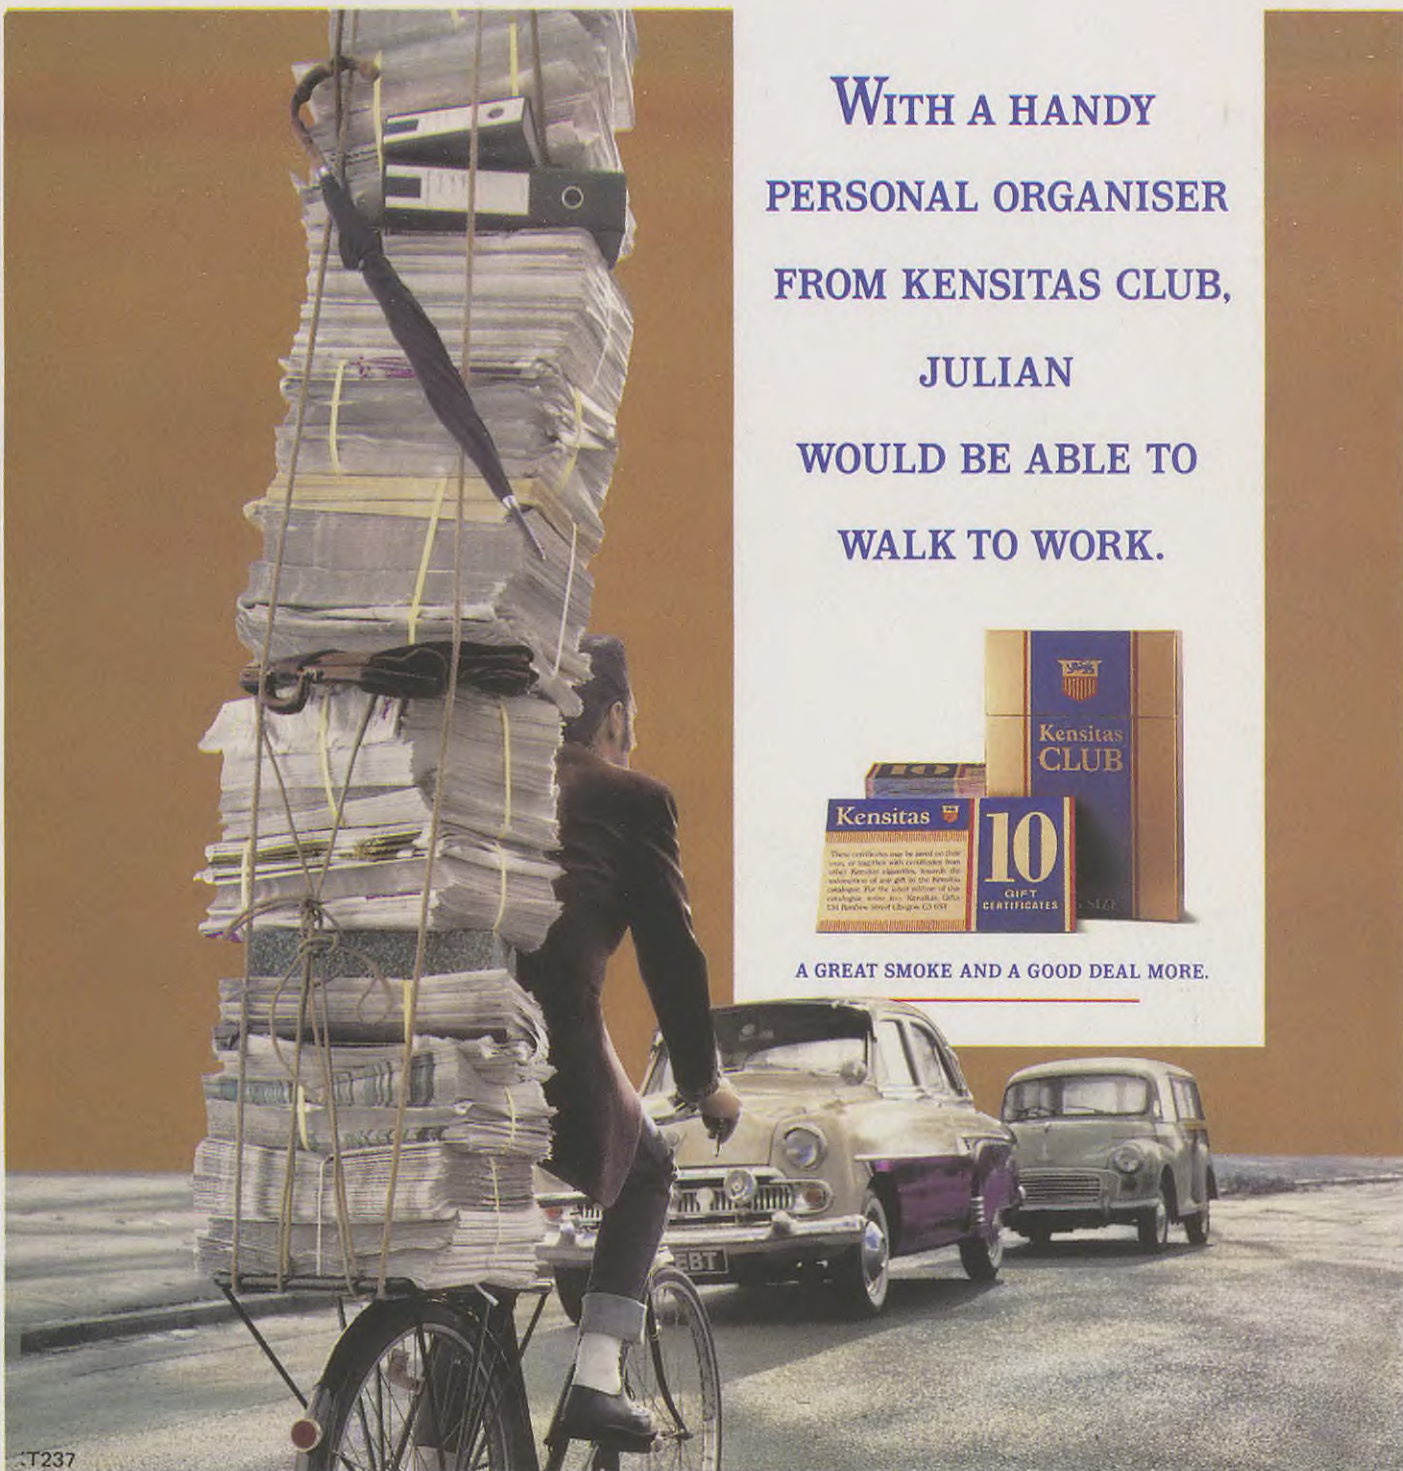

The Football Trust has installed Closed Circuit Television systems at more than 110 British grounds. The cameras have a range of 150 metres and immediate close-up prints can be produced. Within minutes of an incident offenders can be identified and arrested with film made available as evidence in court. CCTV is the most effective anti-hooligan measure inside football grounds and the programme has been extended to include portable systems.

CCTV is only one of The Football Trust's many initiatives. Each year it receives over £9.5 million from the Spotting-the-Ball competition run by Littlewoods, Vernons and Zettors and spends it on projects that benefit all levels of the game throughout the United Kingdom.
