JIMMY BONTHRONE Talking...

Celtic pay their second visit of the season to Pittodrie this afternoon and, as ever, they are most welcome. They are still without Jock Stein at the helm but under the influence of Sean Fallon have settled down to their usual free flowing football

After picking up our first win in the Premier League against Ayr United we lost by the odd goal to League leaders Rangers at Ibrox. The match was played in a dreadful day of wind and rain and neither team really got to grips with the conditions. Both played much better football against the wind and we failed once again because we were unable to take advantage of the five or six chances which came our way during the game. The team played well in the second half against the wind and I was pleased with their performance after the disastrous night against Middlesbrough when we were severely punished for every mistake we made.

They say every cloud has a silver lining so there can be no better time than today for the boys to get back on the goal trail and let in a ray of sunshine.

Despite the disappointments of the season so far the spirit within the club is excellent and we are all working harder than ever to improve our League position by trying to play open, attractive football. We look for a good win today to help us on our way.
